Business agility is inconsistent across the organization, which means there is an opportunity to improve.

70% of agile organizations report success to dynamic business conditions

41% of agile development methods to create and market products competitively

25% of companies have a lack of financial commitment to change

25% of technology leaders are held back by outdated apps/tools

12% report that whole organization is on the path to agility

42% indicate challenges in some departments

38% say practices are inconsistent and slow

Less than a third of respondents consider the other departments in their organization to be agile

CHALLENGES:

Barriers to Adopting Agile Methodologies

GOAL: Why Businesses Must Improve Agility

84% believe the capability to respond more quickly to new opportunities will give them a distinct advantage.

58% report their whole organization is on the path to agility

47% say practices are inconsistent and slow

47% of companies have a lack of financial commitment to change

25% report their whole organization is on the path to agility

Which departments are agile and which are headed in that direction?

INCREASING AGILITY

41% IT

33% Service and Support*

33% PMO

*Bearing most momentum: only 21% think Service and Support is agile, but 33% say this department is increasing agility.

75% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

64% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

R&D/Engineering/Product Development

Marketing

Manufacturing

Service and Support

Legal

Purchasing/Finance

NEXT STEPS: Increase Business Agility

51% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

47% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

Why Business Agility—Multiple Benefits

Reduce project derailments and "fire drills"

Increase visibility across functional groups

Improve collaborative efficiency

51%

47%

survey respondents understand the value of being agile.

FAST FACTS:

State of Business Agility

Survey respondents understand the value of being agile.

70%

33%

33%

33%

PMO

IT

Service and Support*

PMO

R&D/Engineering/Product Development

Marketing

Manufacturing

Service and Support

Legal

Purchasing/Finance

150+ management-level executives participated in a survey: Business Agility Throughout the Enterprise

For companies of all sizes, across multiple industries, business agility is top of mind. Agile business processes throughout all departments in an organization give it the ability to sense, create, and adapt to change quickly and confidently.

Business Agility Throughout the Enterprise

FAST FACTS:

Survey respondents understand the value of being agile.

70% of agile organizations report success to dynamic business conditions.

41% of agile development methods to create and market products competitively.

25% of companies have a lack of financial commitment to change.

25% of technology leaders are held back by outdated apps/tools.

12% report that whole organization is on the path to agility.

42% indicate challenges in some departments.

38% say practices are inconsistent and slow.

Less than a third of respondents consider the other departments in their organization to be agile.

84% believe the capability to respond more quickly to new opportunities will give them a distinct advantage.

58% report their whole organization is on the path to agility.

47% say practices are inconsistent and slow.

47% of companies have a lack of financial commitment to change.

25% report their whole organization is on the path to agility.

Which departments are agile and which are headed in that direction?

INCREASING AGILITY

41% IT

33% Service and Support*

33% PMO

*Bearing most momentum: only 21% think Service and Support is agile, but 33% say this department is increasing agility.

75% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

64% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

R&D/Engineering/Product Development

Marketing

Manufacturing

Service and Support

Legal

Purchasing/Finance

NEXT STEPS: Increase Business Agility

51% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

47% of respondents report wanting to move towards business agility.

Why Business Agility—Multiple Benefits

Reduce project derailments and "fire drills"

Increase visibility across functional groups

Improve collaborative efficiency

51%

47%

51%